A New Social Practice: Building a Culture of Strategic Thinkers Across Your Organization

There are fundamentally two types of conversations at work: Conversations for Action and Conversations for Possibilities. Most of us are so focused on the activities and actions of the day that we rarely practice or learn the art of being in conversation oriented around possibilities. Transforming the culture in your organization means getting people to pick their heads up from their daily tasks to engage in the bigger questions and see the forest for the trees. In this session learn how to cultivate a vivid vision for ourselves, our team and organization, inspire people to work towards a vision of what's possible, and orchestrate productive moods that engage people in a higher purpose.

About Howard Teibel

This webcast
will be recorded on CSU Learn

Howard Teibel is the president of Teibel Education Consulting partnering with higher education administrators, academics, and their boards to reimagine the value of a 21st century education. His approach focuses on transforming how the academy, administrators, and their boards collaborate to move from intractable positions to authentic dialogue and shared commitments. Teibel helps institutions transform outdated practices and creates accelerated and sustainable culture change. Teibel's work is centered around empowering teams to define, commit, and implement changes in social practices, especially in the face of disagreement.
